La Paz es "Ser Campesina": Women and Environmental Peacebuilding in Rural Colombia after FARC Demobilisation

Dr. Luz Ángela Rodríguez

Assistant Professor of Rural and Regional Development at Pontificia Universidad Javeriana in Colombia.

October 1, 2024, 3 pm CST | Coble Hall 306

Trained as an environmental economist, Dr. Rodriguez' current research focuses on the role of gender in environmental peacebuilding in post-conflict rural Colombia. She earned a Ph.D. in Environmental Policy from Duke University and a master's in Environmental Economics and Natural Resources from Universidad de Los Andes. She has extensive experience conducting research on collective action around natural resources in Colombia and Mexico.

Part I of the series on Women Environmental Defenders and Climate Change in the Amazon

Organized by CLACS, NRES, WGGP, and ACES

CLACS Center for Latin American & Caribbean Studies

WGGP Women & Gender in Global Perspectives Program

College of Agricultural, Consumer & Environmental Sciences
University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign